

Presenting material in its strongest, most persuasive case

i3 Statprobe has the expertise to develop submission-ready documents and scientifically sound articles and presentations for the pharmaceutical industry across all phases of clinical trials. Because our highly qualified medical writers and science writers bring deep understanding of the science and technology behind current initiatives, our clients have come to trust in the excellence and timeliness of our work.

Medical writing services designed to expedite approval

Variations in the quality of medical writing can mean the difference between a speedy drug submission and approval, and costly delays. Our highly experienced communications specialists, many of whom hold a PhD or MD, deliver full-service medical writing and editing of regulatory documents with a track record for getting it right the first time.

Supported by our sophisticated IT infrastructure and observing step-by-step quality control standard practices from planning through final e-CTD/Documentation, our documents will meet regulatory agency specifications.

Publications services geared for greater industry recognition

i3 science writers help authors prepare manuscripts of higher quality more quickly and with a greater chance of being published in a leading medical journal. Our cross-functional in-house teams of publications specialists—which include writers, medical editors, fact checkers, and project managers—are backed by outstanding systems and resources. Teams can draw on supporting technical and scientific expertise as needed from i3 specialists in other related areas—medical directors, epidemiologists, and health outcome experts—a significant advantage that accrues fully to our clients' finished publications and industry recognition.

Smart. Right. Timely.

Our medical and scientific writing teams offer the deep experience, diverse expertise, and abject passion it takes to deliver impressive manuscripts and reports that present material in its strongest, most persuasive case—on time, in compliance, and with the highest quality.
