i3 in Latin America

Unlocking the region's unparalleled benefits for your clinical development program

With more than 569 million diverse inhabitants, Latin America is experiencing tremendous growth, not only as a region for conducting clinical trials but also as a consumer market for pharmaceutical products. i3 brings to Latin America the proven functional and therapeutic expertise, familiarity with the local culture and regulatory requirements, and focus on quality to help sponsors make the most of the region's rich resources and market opportunities.

Partner with us to access Latin America's large patient populations for all types of therapeutic indications, aided by our growing network of 1,837 experienced investigators, and obtain robust data that meets the industry's most exacting standards at favorable costs.

Why Latin America?

Latin America continues to offer unparalleled benefits to any clinical development programme, including:

- Consistent regulatory laws
- Quality reinforced by strong adherence to ICH-GCP guidelines
- More than half a billion inhabitants allows for robust enrollment rates
- Strong patient-doctor relationship results in good compliance and high retention rates
- Population consolidated in a few metropolitan areas:
 - Access to large population in small geographic areas
 - Decreased travel to/from sites
 - Multiple hospitals in small areas
 - Diverse hospital types (public vs. private)
 - Consistent standards of care
 - Researchers speak English
- Ethnic diversity covering most of the world's population
- Patients for all therapeutic areas
- Reverse seasons with respect to Europe and North America
- Continuing growth of the clinical trial market
- Substantial market for the sale of approved drugs

Proven regional expertise

With our solid track record in ICH-GCP compliance and quality, and our in-depth knowledge of local regulatory guidelines throughout Latin America, we are uniquely positioned to help you strategically utilise the considerable assets that are available across the region while minimising cultural differences and difficulties.

Find out how i3's specialised approach and proven local resources throughout Latin America can support your next project, from new studies to rescue studies of any size or scope.
